A Message of New Life

October 2009

Dear Friends,

We are in the midst of pre-viewing a program that Paul Dietrich has produced for television on the subject of "Forgiveness". For those of us who were present the first Wednesday evening, we were reminded that not all religions and cultures understand forgiveness in the same way. For example, Christianity has often proclaimed "unconditional forgiveness", that is, a divinely inspired willingness to forgive another no matter how horrendous the injury, even if the perpetrator is not seeking forgiveness.

While I believe that is indeed correct, I also think there is a risk of oversimplification in this definition. The experience of forgiveness must always be rooted in the act of repentance and reconciliation. In the Christian view of life, there is the recognition that too often we turn away from God and turn to "the devices and desires of our own hearts". This is the nature of sin, whereby our true selves, created in God's image, are corrupted as we engage in self-congratulation and self-worship. It is only as we recognize this corruption and turn to God again through the reconciling love of Jesus Christ that we experience forgiveness and thus are empowered to extend forgiveness to those "who have sinned against us". In other words, "unconditional forgiveness" is not about wiping the slate clean and going on as if nothing ever happened. It is, instead, founded on an awareness of God's presence at work in our lives and in our relationships with the rest of God's children and creation.

This awareness of God's presence is, of course, not restricted to our understanding of forgiveness. It permeates all that we are and all that we have. It is that awareness which serves as the impetus for our worship here at Trinity. It is the focus of our education. It is the inspiration for all our ministries. We are a community built upon the revelation of God in Christ and that revelation teaches that God is indeed with us.

In October, you and I will have the opportunity to grow in our awareness of what this means for us. First and foremost, we will be hearing from members of our congregation about the ministry of stewardship. Yes, at this time of year, the focus is on pledging our time, talent, and financial resources to the life of Trinity Church as our Vestry begins to establish budgetary goals for 2010. Christ's love is freely offered to one and all, nonetheless, as long as we are in this world, we must conform to the ways the world conducts its business and that includes paying bills. The ministry of this community is entirely dependent upon the grace of God and that grace is presently exercised through you and me by way of the Holy Spirit. We will be learning more about this particular expression of stewardship in the coming month.

However, please know that, once the pledge cards are returned, the subject of stewardship does not go away. As is the case with forgiveness, our stewardship of God's creation is not seasonal. We will be focusing more and more on what this means daily and in terms of our relationships with one another and again with the larger world around us. Please stay tuned.

Our Annual Meeting represents another opportunity to grow in our awareness of God's presence in our lives. We will meet on Sunday, October 11th. Please Note that there will be one service at 9:30 am. The meeting will begin immediately after the service and our goal is to adjourn no later than 12:15pm. Here is our opportunity to reflect on our ministry of the past year and to prayerfully consider the year to come. This is also the occasion at which we elect new members of the Vestry. Your presence and prayers at the Annual Meeting are very much welcome and requested.

You and I are called day by day to grow in our lives and in our faith. That growth is dependent upon an increasing awareness of God's presence all around us. I look forward to continuing this journey with you.

Faithfully yours in Christ,
The Rev. Rob Banse

THE SEASON OF STEWARDSHIP

If Christmas belongs to December, then Stewardship belongs to October. Of course neither statement is true – Christmas should be lived in our hearts all year, as should the spirit of Stewardship. Having said that, October is the time when we examine the teachings of the Bible on the subject of Giving. It is also a time to examine our hearts.

We can't easily quantify whether we are growing in our interpersonal relationships. Are we becoming more forgiving? Less judgmental? More unselfish? Less critical? Jesus invites us to get right down to the tangible, the touchable, the real, the practical. He says to us "Don't judge, because I am the judge; don't condemn because you don't have the right; forgive because you have been forgiven." And then he says something else. He says "Give." It's in the imperative. It's a command. He says, "Give, and it shall be given unto you." "With the measure you measure, so it will be measured to you." We decide how much to open the faucet. God doesn't promise that we will be more loved or more saved, but we will become greater persons. How we give invariably impacts how we relate to people. It changes us. That is the key to giving. Jesus summons us to it.

During October we will learn about Giving during Worship. We will have conversations about Giving during two Adult Forums (October 25 and November 1). You will receive a packet from the Stewardship Committee containing a pledge card for 2010 together with carefully prepared information about the sources and uses of Trinity's funds, and the financial integrity of this church. Please read these materials carefully, and digest the information prayerfully. Merry Stewardship!

THE CASE FOR TITHING

Ginny Fluet

We began tithing some years ago. At the time, we were like many people – we pledged a reasonable amount (but nowhere close to tithing) and generally paid our pledge on time. But I must confess, I paid all the other bills first and if we ran short, the church would have to wait till we got more money. After all, we didn't have to pay interest or service charges if we were late with the church's money!

During the stewardship campaign that year, my husband and I began to entertain the idea of putting God first in our lives and in our finances. Being the bill payer, I was terrified at the thought of giving 10% of our income to tithing. So we decided to start by always writing our pledge check first and increasing our pledge amount gradually. Amazingly, we always had enough money each month. We continued increasing our pledge and our giving until we reached the tithing level or more. The startling thing to me is that unexpected money seemed to appear whenever we were short. It often seemed that we should be running out of money but we didn't. Whenever we gave more, we had more not less. I don't understand that, but it continues to be true to this day.

The mechanics of tithing (before/after taxes, tithing windfalls, tithing time/money, etc.) aren't important. Although Christians are called to sacrificial financial giving, the amount given is really not important. What's important is that these decisions are between you and God. What's important is that you are willing to put God first in your life, not last. What's important is that you are willing to give back from all that God has given you.

What you'll find is that you will have the joy and abundance that God desires for you. What you'll find is that you are truly blessed. What you'll find is that we are truly Children of God.

Ginny and her husband Joe worship at Trinity, having moved to Virginia over a year ago to be nearer to their grandchildren. They divide their time between Virginia and their previous home in New Hampshire where they remain active members of their church community.

SIX WORD MEMOIRS

Beginning with the September Activities Fair, members of the Trinity Congregation were invited to describe the meaning of Stewardship. The challenge was to take such a wide-reaching and personal topic and condense it into just six words. Enjoy reading some of the submissions received to date, and consider sending your entry to:

The Rooster, the symbol of Peter being smitten by the love of Jesus: Mark Thompson

The Weathercock was used in an early period of church history as an emblem of clerical vigilance, in commemoration of the cock that crowed after Saint Peter denied the Savior thrice during His Passion. As we have been taught, at The Last Supper Jesus predicted that Peter would deny him three times following his death, "Verily I say unto thee, that this night, before the cock crows, thou shalt deny me thrice".

In the ninth century a Pope decreed that the rooster would symbolize the betrayal of Jesus, so he ordered all Catholic churches in Europe to place "weathercocks" on their steeples as a reminder to parishioners of Peter's betrayal and their duty to pray each morning when the cock crows. Other churches followed suit, topping their steeples with weathercocks. In America, particularly in New England, many 18th and 19th century churches placed weathercocks on spires.

Even before the cock was transferred to church steeples live roosters were often placed on the tops of sacred trees. They were partly a watchman and partly a weather prophet, and by crowing it was thought that they could disperse evil spirits and all approaching calamities.

The weathercock that rests atop our beautiful steeple was recently removed for periodic repair and refurbishment. That tedious work was just completed by a professional gilder, Mr. Jack Stark of Berryville, VA. His efforts included painstaking surface preparation and the subsequent application over the entire surface of individual 3.5" x 3.5" sheets of 23.75 carat double-weight gold leaf that were produced in Italy. Our cast bronze weathercock is roughly four feet square and was manufactured in Holland fifty years ago.

A piece of gold leaf is available in the church office for all to examine. Because of the very high purity of the gold that we used, tarnishing is generally not a problem; lower quality gold(s) are alloys having silver, copper etc added that can show tarnish. However, the physical properties of wind driven rain, sleet, hail, and snow will, over time, once again degrade the surface and re-gilding will be necessary. But that should be many years from now.

The weathercock will be hoisted by crane to its rightful place atop our steeple at around 8:00 am on the morning of Oct. 2nd.

Do you have your name tag?

If not please contact the church office or stop and ask a member of Inreach any Sunday.

Inreach: Carolyn Smith

The Inreach Group continues to receive requests for name-tags! As those of you who attend coffee hour now know, we have a splendid new board to display and keep the tags on, in Cox Hall in the corner. Many thanks to Meralyn Autry for making and providing the felt cloth piece, and to

Tommy Breedon for mounting it on the easel! We also continue in our desire and availability to help those in our church community whenever the need arises, be it for a ride to the doctor, for food prepared and delivered in times of illness or bereavement, a note or card of kindness and caring, and so on. We of Inreach also are delighted to be hosting both congregations for Coffee Hour in December. Thanks to the 2 new volunteers we signed up at the Activity Fair, but we can use many more and would be most pleased to welcome you! Thanks and Blessings!

Blowing Horns: Christian Myers, Director of Music Ministries

I am generally not one to blow my own horn, greatly preferring others to do it for me, but as this new season is unfolding I may have to give it a tiny toot and take some credit for an important new development in the life of our church.

Two years ago I was looking for a new Bass section leader in the choir and holding auditions. One of the voice teachers at Shenandoah recommended a new first year graduate student who was studying with him. I knew almost immediately that he was special. His voice was far more developed than the typical college student and his music reading was excellent. However, it was his depth of character and commitment to the greater church that impressed me most. He understood perfectly that, as with all our outstanding section leaders, I wanted more than just a paid voice in the choir, but someone who would become a part of the life of the church viewing music as a ministry and a tool of the Gospel. He even made sure to attend a service here before accepting our position as he knew that wherever he sang would become his church home for a time. Thankfully, it was a good fit for all involved and so it was that Drew Colby first came to Trinity. Toot-toot!

Within a few weeks of singing here, Drew realized that I was also looking for a new Church Music Intern. He came to me and slightly sheepishly asked about the position saying he may not be what I was looking for but would be interested if I was. I definitely was. For the past two years Drew has done an exemplary job as Church Music Intern, singing in and occasionally directing the choir, assisting with the children's choirs, becoming a trusted colleague and friend and an excellent church musician in his own right.

Last Spring, as I was dreading Drew's looming graduation, came the opportunity to keep him. Drew wanted to stay in the area to attend Seminary and Rob was looking for someone to lead Youth and Sunday School programs. I immediately recommended Drew to Rob (toot toot again) and the Vestry approved hiring him ¾ time.

This Fall Drew has started his new position. He is leading the Youth Group, running the Sunday School with help from Betsy and is now officially Trinity Church's first Assistant Music Director. In his new role he has already rejuvenated the Youth group through great devotion, creative programming and loving care. He has taken full responsibility for the children's choirs and continues to work with their developing voices and spirits in a way that is far beyond his years. Drew is intelligent, well educated, kind and caring, strong but gentle and an all around good guy. He approaches all his work from a perspective of devotion and service to Christ and his teachings. What he has and will accomplish here is entirely of his own merit. We are truly blessed to have him be in relationship with this church and should strive to show him the same loving care that he is showing us. And don't forget... I saw him first.

In these economic times where so many are in need a little bit of money well spent can go a long way.

We encourage anyone who would like the Outreach Committee to learn more about a project or organization in financial need that is doing good work in our community and the world to let us know. The forms are available online: www.trinitychurch.org – click on Outreach, or paper forms can be found near the bulletin board in Cox Hall.
